

Media Studies - A Level (OCR)

The Media Studies course at A Level focuses on a range of media texts across the nine different media forms (television, film, radio, newspapers, magazines, advertising and marketing, online, social and participatory media, video games and music video).

Everything you study will be underpinned by the four areas of the theoretical framework, these are:

- Media Language: camerawork, mise-en-scene, editing, sound, genre, narrative
- Representation: stereotypes, social groups, issues, events
- Audience: demographics, passive and active audiences, prosumers
- Industries: ownership of media products we study

A Level Media will allow you to reflect on media in an academic context and apply the knowledge and understanding gained to the process of creating your own media productions. You will develop critical and reflective thinking skills so that you can actively participate in the critical debates surrounding modern media. Creative media production (making your own music video and website helps you understand how theory supports coursework and coursework supports theory. The NEA (coursework) aspect is 30% of the entire A Level. No prior knowledge of the camera or editing is needed.

This course is available for international students, if you are applying as an international student please click here.

WHAT WILL I STUDY?

- News and Online Media
- Media Language and Representation
